SATURDAY EVENING, MARCH 27.

THE LEADVILLE OF TO DAY. - I WO YEARS BOO a little tumble down shanty or two stood on the site now occupied by Leadville, a city containing to day nearly 40,000 inhabitants, and which I do not hesitate to predic', will have 100,000 people before the end of another year. "Tak about the wonderful rise of San Francisco and other places," said Col. Davis, "but think of Leadville in comparison with any of them, and you'll acknowledge that it must get the palm. With its fine banking concerns cosupsing elegent buildings, and doing a very large business; four daily newspapers-three Republican and one Democrat-not excelled in enterprise and general features by any other papers outside of Pillade'phia and New York; several flourishing weekly journals; three first class theatres; nu merous fice churches, including Episcopal, Methodist and Roman Catholic; whole streets full of tusiness structures that are the architectural equa's of these in many of the large Eastern cities, and a fine postoffice building now being erected of brick and stone-it is already a city of no little importance. Except in the outskirts, it is not seattered like many other mining towes, but is compactly built up-more so than Harrisburg, of which, I thick, it is the equal, if it does not go beyond that city in population. Nearly all the temporary woeden structures have already given place to substantial buildings of stone and brick. Any quantity of good bricks can be made there. suitable c'ay being found in the immediate vicinity."—Philadelphia Times.
